

Frauenfeld's roundabout

Since 1999 Frauenfeld has probably the first underground roundabout in Europe. It is located directly under the square in front of the railway station.

Town twinning

After the second world war Frauenfeld organised food, medicine and recreation holiday for children from Kufstein in Tyrol. Since that time, Frauenfeld and Kufstein maintain this partnership.

The Weather

Mostly clear, with occasional storms of enthusiasm.

Sensational discovery in Frauenfeld

Children found a treasure map in abandoned ruin

It was in spring 1964, when Dr. Jeremias Steininger was searching a mysterious treasure in Frauenfeld. Probably he found it, but then he was invaded by treasure robbers. At that time, Dr. Steininger disappeared without a trace, and with him all his records. Was he able to save the treasure? Nobody knows it.

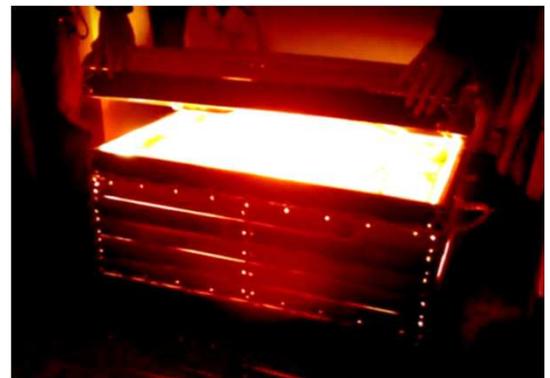

Dr. Steininger during excavations in Rome, Italy

Exactly 50 years after this event, the long-lost treasure map and Dr. Steininger diary resurfaced. Children who were playing in an abandoned ruin near Frauenfeld found these artifacts.

It is true. The cross of the treasure map is pointing to Frauenfeld. Experts still believe that finds from the Roman period can be found here. Dr. Steininger's records indicate that. Unfortunately, it was not possible to decipher his notes until today. It is believed, however, that the treasure is on the Allmend, where Dr. Steininger was last seen.

Everybody is invited to participate in the search for the former archeological site. The successful finder will be rewarded.

Experts from all over the world are travelling to Frauenfeld on the weekend of 9 to 11 May 2014 to work together to find the treasure. The path leads from the railway station to the Allmend. Find the mysterious character on the way. Is someone able to decode them correctly?

The editorial team wishes all treasure hunter a lot of success and is pleased to announce the lucky winner in our next issue.
